Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in a telephone interview with Mr. David F. Yager on 04/27/2005.

The application has been amended as follows:

Claim 1

(Currently amended) A system for access control comprising:

a database, said database including, a user interface having means to generate key codes and add user codes whereby issuing a security code with user defined parameters, a control device [having:] comprising:

[independent and isolated operation from said database, the control device further including] an input device for entering security codes;

a multitude of key codes stored in a memory equivalent to key codes generated by said database and, a controller with programming having means to compare key codes inputted, to key codes in the memory and, when equal, interpret said user code whereby performing a required output relative to said user code parameters[.];

Art Unit: 2132

wherein said database and the control device are not electrically connected and, have security code activities that are synchronized, and wherein said database and the control device operate independently; and the control device further including a software program having means to limit said key codes in the memory available for comparison to inputted security codes from a total key codes in the memory.

Claim 2

(Currently amended) The system as set forth in claim 1, wherein said user codes are defined by user input via [a]said user interface.

Claim 4

(Currently amended) The system as set forth in claim 1, wherein [the]said database may reside on a computing device selected from a group consisting of a personal computer, a handheld computing device, or a server.

Art Unit: 2132

Claim 11

(Currently amended) The system as set forth in claim 10, the software program further including an algorithm having means to regenerate key codes to new key codes equal to newly regenerated key codes in [the]said database.

Claim 12

Cancelled.

Claim 13

(Currently amended) The system as set forth in claim 1, the [access] control device further including a software program having means to recognize valid security codes inputted when said security codes are inputted in a different sequential order than issued from [the]said database.

Claim 14

(Currently amended) The system as set forth in claim 1, the [access] control device further including a software program having means to interpret the user defined parameters of the inputted user code and perform a function relative to the user code parameters.

Art Unit: 2132

Claim 15

(Currently amended) A method for access control comprising:

utilizing a computer program and a database having a user interface to generate [obtain a unique] key codes, storing the key codes, add a user code comprised of user defined parameters and provide [the] a [resulting] security code to an access control user, said access control user inputs the security code into a[n] [access] control device via an input device, said [access] control device having key codes stored in a memory equivalent to said key codes stored on the database, said [access] control device further including a software program having means to limit [the amount of] key codes in the memory available for comparison to inputted security codes from [the] a total [amount of] key codes in the memory, said [access] control device compares inputted key codes to those in the memory and if valid, interprets the user code [portion] of the security code to perform a required output, wherein the database and said control device are not electrically connected and have security code activities that are synchronized, wherein the database and said control device operate independently.

Claim 18

Cancelled.

Claim 19

[18]19. The method as set forth in claim 15, [the] said [access] control device further including a software program and algorithm having means to archive used security codes and regenerate key codes to new key codes equal to newly regenerated key codes in the database.

Claim 20

[19]20. The method as set forth in claim 15, [the]said [access] control device further including a software program having means to recognize valid security codes inputted when said security codes are inputted in a different sequential order than issued from the database.

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this section can be found in the prior office action.
3. The prior office actions are incorporated herein by reference. In particular, the observations with respect to claim language, and response to previously presented arguments.
